

THE DAILY BEE. COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Monday Morning October 6.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES. By Carrier... By Mail...

OFFICE: No. 7 Pearl Street, Near Broadway.

MINOR MENTION.

City council meeting this evening. The Blaine and Logan club meet at headquarters this evening.

Twenty-three of Cal Wagners company were Sunday stoppers at the Pacific.

A donation is to be given Rev. J. Z. Armstrong at the Methodist church this evening.

Rev. George S. Patton, of Omaha, supplied the Congregational pulpit here yesterday.

Ella Bradshaw was arrested Saturday on the charge of stealing some money from her mother.

A. T. Flickinger reports the rain fall from 4 o'clock Thursday to 9 o'clock Saturday morning is 3 1/2 inches.

Mrs. W. H. Almy has sworn out a second warrant for a cow, which she believes is in Julius Dickner's possession.

During the severe thunder storm of Friday night the steeple of the Methodist church at Macedonia was struck by lightning causing considerable damage.

The exposition at the rink has a grand closing this evening. There will be a carnival of authors, a New England supper, a stage entertainment, and roller skating.

There was a rousing republican meeting at Coln Saturday night, at which Col. Hepburn spoke. A special train of five coaches, crowded full, was run down from Ulranda.

The newly organized choir of St. Paul's Episcopal church consists of Miss Bertha Mueller, Miss Cook, Mr. Marshall Treynor and Mr. Will Treynor, and Miss Effie Warren as organist.

Chas. H. Warner, of this city, has been appointed assistant commissioner for this congressional district of Iowa of the department of the colored folk's exhibits at the World's Exposition to be held in New Orleans.

The horrible condition of Willow avenue, one of the streets supposed to have been improved, caused D. J. Rockwell to abandon a light buggy, leaving it in a mud-hole while he got the horse out as best he could.

Regular monthly meeting of the board of trade this evening. It is about time that the board aroused enough interest to at least get a quorum. There are many matters of importance which the board should take hold of.

A fifteen-year-old boy has been putting on the gloves with members of the police force, just for fun, at the police station. He knocked the biggest of the force out of time in three rounds, blacked the marshal's eye, and scattered the second assistant jailer into pieces.

The Hamburg Times has an eccentric make-up. In publishing the proceedings of the anti-prohibitionist convention, recently held in this city, it prefaces it with the Sunday school lesson for October 5, and the golden text "Arise therefore and be doing, and the Lord be with thee."

J. M. Matthews, the county superintendent of schools, had quite a serious time in returning by team from Crescent City in company with his wife. The team started to run down a steep hill, and Mr. Matthews, in holding on, suffered a dislocation of one of the bones of the forearm.

Nelson Bros., of Cedar Rapids, have just put out their Pocket Railway Guide of Iowa. Anyone traveling through this state can not find anything so convenient and so cheap. The time of arrival and departure of all trains at all points in the state and much other valuable information, and all for a quarter.

The condition of Broadway yesterday excited much comment from Sunday strollers. The paved portion of the street is in many places in bad shape on account of the caving in where sewerage has been laid, and the unpaved portions are impassable. At different places signboards—"dangerous"—are planted, and at one point the street is blocked effectually, preventing travel over it.

The Social Union, an organization of the young people of the Presbyterian church, will to-night give the closing entertainment of the exposition at the skating rink. A New England supper is to be served from 5:30 to 9 o'clock at 20 cents each. The entertainment begins at 8 o'clock, and at its close there will be roller skating. Any and all who desire are also invited to appear in the costume of some character of fiction, the purpose being to make it an author's carnival.

The Woodbine man, McGulligan, who was cruelly slugged here the other night, was Saturday taken to his home. He was still in a dazed condition and unable to give any intelligible answers to questions put to him. It is now learned that at a late hour the night he was slugged, he was in company with two hard looking negroes, whom he treated to drinks, and suspicion points to them as knowing more about the slugging than they care to tell.

The law firm of Scott & Stewart has dissolved, Col Scott taking into a new partnership his son, while Mr. J. J. Stewart opens an office by himself over the Savings' bank, corner of Broadway and Main street, in the rooms lately occupied by Mayne & ... Mr. Stevens is a young man of both integrity and ability, and has not only made an excellent reputation as a lawyer, and high rank among the members of the bar, but in business and social circles he is highly esteemed, and he will doubtless continue to find his services in demand.

Miss Neely Stevens, who will soon leave this city to make her home in New York, has been prevailed upon to give a final subscription concert at Dohany's opera house, the date of which will be duly announced. The subscription list will be left at Bushnell's to-day, when a chance will be given the citizens to show their appreciation of Miss Stevens' merit.

Miss Stevens will be assisted by Omaha's favorite musician, Miss Calderwood, and by Mr. Cahn. The concert will be of a high order of merit, and Miss Stevens, who has always been a prime favorite with Council Bluffs audiences, should be given a most liberal patronage.

Several items are crowded out this morning on account of lack of space.

VAUGHAN'S VIEWS.

The Annual Address Delivered by Him at Papillon's Big Pumpkin Show.

The second annual fair of the Sarpy county agricultural society closed at Papillon, Neb., on Saturday. On the afternoon of that day, Mayor W. R. Vaughan, of this city, gave the annual address, of which the following portions are of great interest:

Our Puritan forefathers were believers in individual thought only so long as the individual was willing to think as they did. Any one who did not think as they did they did not propose to tolerate, and they told them so, and sometimes clipped their ears that they might hear and note this fact the better. But in our day and generation every man is expected to think for himself, and we try to teach our children and young people to do so. And to-day there is no stronger support in the whole structure of the American nation than this very element of individual thought, permeating as it does all classes and conditions of men among us.

Our common school system is, of course, the root of this tendency, but in the industrial exhibitions, which are springing up all over the country, lie the great objects lessons, supplementing this grand popular education as it progresses from the common schools to the colleges, to the workshops, to the mines, and to the fields. What idea, do you think, one child in a hundred, pouring with weary brain over his maps of yellow, pink and green, acquires of this vast country in which we live? Do you not think, nay, do you not know, that those same children will learn more of those outlying sections in one-half hour in our fairs among the wonders in the exhibits made by the western railroads?

I think it may be truly said that most of the improvements and inventions which have contributed so much to the comfort of mankind and the wealth of the nations, are very largely due to the industry of those who have risen by their own endeavor from the humble walks of life. There is a fixedness and reliability in agricultural pursuits which are not always found in other branches of industry. The soil remains ever ready to be tilled, and the farmer, with ruddy health and brawny arms, depends alone upon the work of his hands and kind Providence for a reward of his labor.

Their farmers are the most independent of our citizens. They produce, or have within their reach, all they need for their necessities and for their comfort. Their crops may be more abundant at one harvest than another, and their products may command a higher price at one market than another. These conditions may expand or contract, their ability to indulge in luxuries or in expenditures, not absolutely needful, but they should never be in want of the necessities of life. This is the sure result of well regulated farming. When the farmer falls and becomes bankrupt in his business, we may look for shiftlessness, or a too ambitious desire to own more land or stock than he can pay for, or an interfering meddling with matters that bear no relation to his farm, or such mismanagement and ignorance as demonstrate that he has mistaken his vocation. In the industrious, intelligent and contented farmer, the state finds a safe and profitable citizen, always contributing to its wealth and power. The real value of the farmer to the state is not fully appreciated until we consider that he feeds the millions of our people who are engaged in other pursuits; that the product of his labor fills the revenues of our commerce, and supplies an important factor in our financial relations with other nations. It is the farmer's right, and his duty, to demand that all unjust and inequitable burdens upon agriculture and its products, however caused, should be removed, and that while the furtherance of the other interests of the state have due regard, this important one should not be neglected. Thus, by his labor as farmer, and in the full performance of his duty as citizen, he will create and secure to himself his share of the result of his toil, and save and guard for all the people a most important element in the prosperity of the state.

Our prosperity is not dependent on the decadence of other nations, but upon the mighty energy of America. Our prosperity is dependent upon utilizing the gifts that Almighty God has placed in our possession, and not upon the hope of overcoming or breaking down any people in the world, but in making the best and highest use of what Providence has placed in our hands. I will not say that the people of the west are the greatest people in America; but, I will say this, that time and distance being practically annihilated as they are, in the race of industry, in the race of art, in the struggle for all that makes a people materially great and prosperous, that country will take precedence in the matter of resources are the best. It has been predicted that the population of this country, at the end of the century, would be a hundred millions. A hundred millions of American citizens make a grand basis for a nation's development in a clear atmosphere, under the most inspiring of inventive enterprises, in about twenty years, by working upon the mighty gifts of Providence vouchsafed to us, more affluent and diversified than ever seen in the history of any other people in the world. Who is going to compete successfully with the hundred millions of people? We don't want the balance of the American continent; but we do want free and cordial and amicable relations with it all. Farmers should be economical, for of the enormous crops raised in this country, we at home consumed ninety per cent. of our vast manufactures. We export only about two per cent. and while the whole of the American people are the best fed and best clad of any people on the face of the earth, it should be remembered that the world, and even the most civilized state in the world, is always within less than one year of starvation, never having a full year's product of food on hand at any one time, and so the most civilized nation is always within two or three years of becoming naked; in fact, the entire capital of the richest state, to-wit: all the railroads, mills, works, ware-houses, dwelling-houses, and goods and wares of every kind in existence, bear a market value not exceeding the value of two, or at the utmost of three, years' product of the same state. Hence it follows that all profits, all wages, all taxes are and must be derived from the market value of the annual products and economy and industry should be the pass-word of every producer. The woman's department of the fair and society shows the importance of women in the industrial field, and calls attention to the fact of her importance in the arts, outside her merely domestic usefulness.

Honest self-support by women is no longer reprehensible. It is only the heathen and the Turk who treat their women as play things. The woman of America demands something else. She aspires to be the fellow-laborer and equal of man, as well as his companion. We do not see women harnessed to the same burden with the dog in this country, but we have seen them harnessed by customs and fettered by prejudice and ridicule. This era, thank God, is passing, and the woman of to-day and to-morrow is proving, and will prove that, she is and will be, the intellectual equal of man.

In conclusion, let me say that we should study the instructive illustrations that nature has been made. We see man increasing his control over the forces of nature more and more, adapting all the objects about him to his comfort and support. You see the manufacturer, inventor and laborer bringing those forces, to a remarkable degree, to answer the needs of man's life and the uses of his home. Land and labor should be placed upon an equality with other industries, whether of trade, transportation or manufactures. Each is entitled to enjoy what it earns, and must yield to government, in the form of taxes, the just proportion of whatever may be necessary for the security of the whole.
